UNSPOKEN.

I may not keep thee, dear. I long have known
An hour must come for farewell look and sigh;
An hour wherein love blossoms that have blown
Around our path, like summer flowers must die.
And I have communed with my wilkeful heart,
And thought of all that I would say to thee,
Ere hand and lip from hand and lip should part,
And oceans roll between my love and me.
But as we stand upon the moor to-day,
The gorse and purple heather at our feet,
I have no spirit left in me to say
The words I meant to be so strong and sweet;
No eloquence to help me at my need
No words of fire to thrill my last 'God-speed!"

Yet standing thus beneath September's sky,
With solitude around us, God above,
We feel, with precious moments fleeting by,
That silent farewell better suiteth love.
No honeyed phrase can ease the cruel smart
Felt with the stroke fate dealeth us to day,
I read each longing of thy tender heart,
Thou knowst all I would but cannot say.
I do not bind thee by a parting vow,
Thou speakest not of faithfulness to me;
It is enough to be together now,
Ere yet between us rolls the mighty sea.
Silent, alone among the moorland flowers,
Passeth the last of all our happy hours!

Major Boots.

Once upon a time a certain gentleman, who lived splendidly and did not pay his debts, owed his shoemaker a large bill, and the shoemaker having been told to call again many times, and having written notes without end asking for a settlement, resolved to disgrace his customer by exposing him to his friends the very next time he gave one of those large dinner parties which so excited the creditor's ire.

Accordingly, having seen the wagons of the caterer stop before the door, and watched the waiters enter one by one, Mr. Shoemaker, attired himself in his Sunday suit, and with his little bill elegantly written out, awaited the appearance of the carriages and when at least fifty had arrived, set down their burdens and departed, stalked up the doorsteps like a vengeful ghost, and ringing the bell furiously, found it opened for him with startling celerity, and stood face to face with a tall, black waiter, white gloved and stately.

"Where's Mr. Cheatem?" whispered the shoemaker.

"Gentlemen's dressing-room, second floor back," responded the waiter.

Some one else had arrived, and was treading on his heels. A vision of splendor, in the most wonderful, soft, white wraps floated past him.

"Ladies, front room, second floor, gentlemen, back," repeated the waiter.

Mr Shoemaker was hustled forward, hat in hand, and saw his delinquent debtor in all the elegance of dress-coat button hole flower, and white cravat, bowing to, shaking hands with and smiling upon aristocratic personages innumerable.

The sight fanned anew the flame of the tradesman's just wrath. He marched forward, planted himself directly before the elegant Mr. Cheatem, and stared him in the face.

But Cheatem did not wilt. He knew his guest well enough and he understood his purpose; but what he did say, was:

"Beg pardon; for the moment I've forgotten your name."

"Have you? Then perhaps you'll remember me when I tell you that I made your boots."

"Now, if you'll trouble yourself to repeat these last four words rapidly, you will find that you don't say, as you believe you do; 'I made your boots,' but, 'I majur boots.'"

The lucky Cheatem detected this fact on the instant.

"Major Boots!" he cried, demonstratively shaking hands. "Dear, dear; how could I forget you for a moment! Delighted to see you—delighted. Mrs. Chiffins, let me introduce you to my old friend, Major Boots."

"So glad to know you," responded the old lady thus introduced. "I'm sure I've heard Cousin Cheatem speak of you a thousand times. Sit down, do, and tell me who all these people are. I'm quite a stranger I've isolated myself in Europe so long. Sit down, Major Boots; here is a chair."

The newly-christened shoemaker hesitated a moment, but it was not possible for him to cry out: "I'm not Major Boots; I'm Clamp, the shoemaker, come for my bill." He found he had not the courage. He crammed his hat under the velvet chair to which he was motioned, and subsided into angry silence while the old lady went on:

"Oh Major, I always feel so privileged when I have the opportunity to talk to a military man. I adore courage. And were you ever wounded? Do tell me all about it."

The bootmaker, finding it necessary to reply, said "that he never had been wounded."

And the old lady went on:

"Never! How charming! Bcre a charmed life, and all that sort of thing. Do tell me all about it."

The shoemaker replied "that there was nothing to tell."

On which that most gushing of old ladies cried:

"Now, Major, I won't believe that. It's like the modesty of you celebrated military men. I know you stormed redoubts and led forlorn hopes, and were the only one left of your regiment, and all that. I'm sure I read all about it at the time. Oh, here is Colonel Hobbs, a celebrated English officer, did something awfully brave in India. Colonel let me made you acquainted with Major Boots, one of our bravest military men. He's been telling me all about the wonderful things he did in the army. I mean he wouldn't tell me about them—just like all you great men—won't trouble himself to fight his batttes over for an old woman."

"Aw.—awfully charmed, I'm sure," responded the gallant colonel. "Awfully, aw. Must introduce you to my brother, Captain Hobbs in the same wegiment with myself."

The shoemaker had arisen and was looking down on his business suit.

"I didn't intend to—that is, I didn't expect to be at such a swell affair as this," he stammered, "or I—I should have word my dress-suit."

"Oh, my dear fellow, we always expect you Amewican officers to be wough and weady. We'd be disappointed if you were not. The ladies, you know, adore wough and weady men. It's the particular charm of Amewicans."

Away he led the bootmaker, who really began to feel that he must have been, at some period of his life, a mititary man. And after being introduced to Captain Hobbs as Major de Boots, who was "delighted," found himself tete-a-tete with a very lovely young French lady, who addressed him as "General de Buta," and whom, at the request of his hostess, whom he had never seen before, and who had no idea who he was, he took down to supper.

Somehow this stranger in his mixed suit, and with his sulky air, had been set down as a most eccentric and distinguished military man by everybody. He was regarded with attention, listened to with reverence when he condescended to say a few words. The French lady introduced him voluminously as General de Buta; and thus was he addressed thereafter. The waiters offered him champagne frequently, and the bootmaker gradually grew exhilerated. Never had he been present at such elegant festivities. Never had he partaken of such viands—been so overwhelmed with festivities. Never had so lovely a creature leaned on his arm. Never had he tasted such wine. At first it exhilerated him, then it mounted to his head, and suddenly it appeared to him that his host was a glorious fellow, and that he was under infinite obligations to him.

Doubling his fist, he brought it down upon the table with a crash that made the glasses ring again.

"Better man than Cheatem don't live!" cried he.

"I agree with you," replied his neighbor, politely.

"Ah! I adore such enthusiastic friendship, such lof like Damon and Pythias in ze play," ejaculated the French lady.

"How original! How delightfully eccentric! A perfect military man," whispered others.

Meanwhile the bootmaker, staggering to his feet, made his way, as best he might, toward his host.

"Cheatem," he cried, look here! I came" —here he reeled and caught at a table—"I came to give you this—before every (hic) everybody"

And he held out his folded bill, which Mr. Cheatem instantly took.

"Now I—I wouldn't (hic) do it—for—for—"

Mr. Cheatem beckoned two waiters.

"My dear old friend," he said, "you're not quite well. Let these men put you in a carriage, and go home. I'll call on you to-morrow. So glad to have seen you. As for this—pooh! pooh!

The waiters led the bootmaker from the room, after their host had whispered a direction to be given the driver.

And Mr. Cheatem thus addressed his friends:

"You must not think ill of my old friend for this little lapse of his. After the trials of military life it is only to be expected that his habits should not be those of quiet civikans, and 'tis his only weakness."

"One forgives everything in a soldier," remarked a lady.

"A very ordinary failing for a military man," responded a gentleman.

"And to think the honest creature should have remembered so slight an indebtedness as this, and been so anxious about it," sighed Mr. Cheatem, as he put the shoemaker's receipted bill into his pocket.

How the Fooler was Fooled.

A party on the West Hill did not make much by fooling his wife. When he went home late, waiting until after twelve o'clock so as to play the joke, he rang the door bell, and answered "April fool" when she appeared at the door. His wife laughed over the joke, and it was soon forgotten. About two o'clock in the morning our friend was awakened by his wife, who informed him that there was something wrong with the horse at the barn. She held the lamp while he went out to see. As soon as he had gone a short distance, he "smelled a mice," and returned to find the door locked. He knocked, pounded, kicked, but it did no good. He went around to the bedroom window and could hear his wife breathing regularly, as though quietly sleeping. He could not go down town for he was en dishabille. Finally, tapping on the window he gently called:

"Dear!"

"Yes."

"Let me in!"

"Will you promise never to try to April fool me again?"

"Yes."

"Will you get me that new bonnet?"

"Yes."

There was a turning of bolts, and the man, who had gone home happy with the thought of fooling his wife, passed in and retired. But we will wager that the party who informed us will die if he is found out.

Shaking Their Relations.

One of the most remarkable things noticeable in social life is the unanimity with which people shake their relatives. Recently a gentleman arrived in Carson with a letter of introduction to one of our leading citizens from the citizen's uncle. After the Carsonite read the letter he remarked:

"Glad to see you, sir. Glad to see anybody who knows my uncle in Cleveland. How are all the folks?"

"Splendid. I spent six weeks there last fall, and I don't really think I ever met such a fine family of genial, hospitable and cultivated people."

"Yes?"

"Yes, indeed—I never spent a pleasanter time in my life. Your relatives are, indeed, the—"

"Well, young man, if my relatives are such fine people they must have changed like thunder since I lived with them there a year, and I think they are about the worst pelicans in the deck. I wouldn't spend a month with the crowd for the whole town of Cleveland."

"Indeed," said the other. "Well, since you've been so candid about it I might as well remark right here that your uncle and his whole family are the toughest collection of old fossils I have ever had the misfortune to be steered against."

"Put it there, young man—you show good sense. Let's go out and take a something."

In a few minutes more the two men were pledging perdition to the Cleveland relatives over a foaming schooner of Carson beer.

A Lawyer's Predicament.

What is known as the "Western Hotel game" was tried on an ordinarily sharp Boston lawyer recently, and was frustrated through the shrewdness of a bank cashier, but to the extreme discomfiture of the lawyer. The operator was a young and attractive woman, and the victim was Charles E. Allen, having an office in Pemberton Square. The developement of the case was full of surprise to all concerned. Late one afternoon the young woman in question drove up in a carriage to the National Security Bank, on Court street, and on entering the bank presented a check for $1,000, signed by Charles E. Allen. The gentleman has had frequent dealings with the bank, and from the fact that some time ago several blank checks had been stolen from his check-book, and a few had been subsequently presented at different places for payment with forged signatures, the bank officers were particularly cautious in paying out money on checks purporting to be drawn by him and presented by strangers. Accordingly the cashier, Mr. Charles R. Batt, when the check was presented, became at once suspicious, and stepped to the President to ask whether he should give the money. As the woman was giving the closest attention at the time, the President thought it prudent to reply in the affirmative. As soon as the teller had begun counting out the bills the cashier slipped out of the bank unperceived, and hastened to the detectives' headquarters in Pemberton Square. Officers Wade and Hersom immediately hurried to the scene of the transaction, and, as but a few moments had passed since the presentation of the check, the woman was still there. After the officers had stationed themselves outside, the cashier entered and informed the woman that no payment would be made. She then started to leave, and was arrested by the detectives, who took her to their office. On the way she attempted to swallow the paper that had caused so much trouble, but this was prevented. The woman gave the name of Louisa Silvan, and on searching her, keys were found to rooms in the Revere House. Then followed the surprises. The detectives first went to the lawyer's office in Pemberton Square, confident that he would prove the signature on the check as a forgery. But the lawyer was out. They then repaired to the Revere House, and in answer to an inquiry if Louisa Silvan was stopping there, was shown to an apartment in the hotel. Unlocking the door with the keys which had been found, what was the detectives' astonishment at discovering the very lawyer of whom they had been in search, without his coat and appearing very much ashamed at being caught in the predicament. Questioning him, the detectives were told that he had been invited by the woman to call at her room to see about the purchase of some real estate. He complied with her request, and once at the hotel the woman induced him to remove his coat. Then, before he was aware of her design, she had thrown that garment into her trunk and locked it. Turning upon the bewildered lawyer, she demanded $10,000 or threatened to ring the bell and call the police. Finally she reduced the sum to $1,000, and a check for the amount was given her, when she left, taking the precaution to lock the door, and promising to let her prisoner go in case the money was paid. The woman is unknown to the detectives.

The Fireside.

The fireside is a seminary of infinite importance. It is important because it is universal, and because the education it bestows, woven in with the woof of childhood, gives form and color to the whole texture of life. There are few who can receive the honors of a college, but all are graduates of the hearth. The learning of the university may fade from the recollection, its classic lore may moulder in the halls of memory; but the simple lessons of home, enamelled upon the hearts of childhood, defy the rust of years, and outlive the more mature but less vivid pictures of after days. So deep, so lasting, indeed, are the impressions of early life, that you often see a man in the imbecility of age holding fresh in his recollection the events of childhood, while all the wide space between that and the present hour is a blasted and forgotten waste. You have, perchance, seen an old and half-obliterated portrait, and in the attempt to have it cleaned, and restored seen it fade away, while a brighter and much more perfect picture, painted beneath, is revealed to view. This portrait first drawn upon the canvas, is no inapt illustration of youth, and though it may be concealed by some after design, still the original traits will shine through the outward picture, giving it tone while fresh, and surviving it in decay. Such is the fireside—the great institution furnished by Providence for the education of man.

Hints for the Laundry.

If you invite friends to pass a week or more with you, try to fix the visit to begin the day after the ironing is done. Your girl feels a weight off her mind, has time to cook the meals better, and you will find her a much more willing attendant upon yout guests. Do not have beefsteak for dinner on washing or ironing days—arrange to something you can roast in the oven, or else have cold meat. Do not have fried or boiled fish. The smell sticks, and your clothes will not be sweet; besides, the broiler and frying-pan takes longer to clean. As for vegetables, do not have spinach, peas, string beans, or applesauce, as these good things take time to prepare, and can be avoided as well as not. If it is asked what to have, let me suggest baked white or sweet potatoes, macaroni, boiled rice, parsnips, sweet corn, stewed tomatoes, any canned vegetables in the winter. For dessert, baked apples and cream, bread pudding, or something easily prepared. The lady of the house will find it both pleasant, easy and economical to attend to the dessert herself. Neither do we call dusting work, and strongly advise her to all she can of it. Of course there is much that a lady must do about her house to to have it neat and attractive, but we do not call this actual work. It is rather laying the hand of taste and adaption upon her belongings, and so making her home harmonious and individual.

During mild weather sheep should not be kept in too warm pens, but should be given the run of the barnyard in the daytime.

Why He Would Not Buy.

He was a tall, thin man who hadn't been shaved for probably two weeks. His hat had holes in the top of it, his clothes shone like a placid lake at sun rise and how his shoes managed to stay on was known only to themselves. He ambled up the narrow stairs and into Mr. Margrave's law office. The lawyer was sitting in his chair chewing on his penholder.

"Is Mr. Margrave in!" inquired the peddler.

"Yes, sir," was the reply, 'I am he.'

"Ah yes," responded the fiend, reflectively, as he rubbed his chin with his knuckles, "if you are at leisure, the Mellifluous Morning Glory of the Appenines would like a moments audience."—

"Certainly, certainly," responded the man of law," take a seat. Now, then, state your case. Is it a divorce you come—"

"No sir. Oh, no, its—"

"Assault and battery I presume," quietly interposed the lawyer, as he picked up his pen to make a memorandum.

"Oh no, you are wrong," smilingly replied Mellifluous Morning Glory of the Appennes. "I just came in here to have you examine a salve I'm selling. It is composed entirely of vegetable matter and is made by myself only and is called the Aromatic Soul of Mignonette. It is just the thing you want. It is as necessary as overshoes. Of course, I do not mean for a moment to insinuate that it will keep your feet warm or keep water out of your boots. I was only speaking metaphorically. You tumble to my metaphor, eh.

"Yes sir."

"Well now, here is a box—a nice little sky blue box which will make a nice play thing for one of your children when it is empty. It is only twenty-five cents per box and this is genuine. See my signature."

"Yes."

"Well, that's satisfactory. Now that we understand each other we'll just get down to business. Now how many boxes will you take?"

While the lawyer was thinking, the canvasser continued:

"There is no doubt of the virtue of this great healer. It will cure chapped lips in one night. I have known it to close up cracks in a door and on one occasion a woman put some on her lips and it drew them together and closed her mouth. Her husband came down next day and rewarded me handsomely. I have testimonials from lots of ministers and prominent men.

Here the lawyer chewed on his pen handle in revery and enquired:

"Have you a letter recommending your salve from the man who sawed Courtney's boats in too?"

"I have not."

"Then sir, I can't purchase anything from you. When I buy salve, it has got to be endorsed by the man who sawed Courtney's boats."

"Yes," responded the fiend savagely as he backed towards the door, "you are one of them lads what always finds fault and won't be satisfied. You're a healthy man—you are. You wouldn't buy a box of pills unless it had a set of legislative resolutions and a schedule of the dates of the deaths of all the famous people for the past two centuries attached to it."

Then he slammed the door and went down stairs.

A Tarred Roof.

A man living in West End of Baltimore recently had the flat roof of the L of his house tarred, and when six or seven cats got on it the following night they could yell and arch their backs and try to get a pull on all four feet at once, but they couldn't lift themselves free and their sighing was frightful, and people in the neighborhood began to chuck things at them, and the owner of the house forgot about the tar and went barefoot and in his robe de nuit upon the roof to chase them off, and pretty soon found he couldn't stir, and he began to whoop and swear, and a policeman got a ladder and climbed upon the roof, and when he came up over the edge, on his hands and knees, he had to remain in that posture. Meantime the bootjacks were falling in a shower about and upon them, and the man's mother-in-law, in looking out of an upper window that overlooked the L roof, to ask them if they were not ashamed to be out on a roof playing cat at that time of night, unfortunately knocked her wig off, and it fell in the tar; and then she rushed down a flight and went out on the roof to get it, and couldn,t pull the wig up, but got her hand stuck to it so she couldn't let go of it, and of course her position and her bald head made a dead give away, as it was quite light, when some one finally came with boards to put down on the roof for them to be got on to when they were cut loose from the tar, and the old lady didn't feel a bit worse than the policeman, who had to walk through the streets with the knees of his trousers cut out and left stuck on the roof and a great hunk of tar stuck to each hand, and got a reprimand when he reached the station. And the houseowner himself blistered his feet trying to melt the tar off of them by holding them up to a hot stove, and when the cats were cut loose from the roof and put on the ground they tried to gnaw the tar from their claws and got their paws stuck in their mouths and rolled about and yowled and carried on so that folks thought they were mad and killed them.

False Teeth and Crutches.

Among the passengers who boarded the east-bound train at Holly, Michigan, the other day were a bride and groom of the regular holly-hock order. Although the car was full of passengers the pair began to squeeze hands and hug as soon as they were seated. This of course attracted attention, and pretty soon everybody was nodding and winking, and several persons so far forgot themselves as to laugh outright. By and by the broad-shouldered and red-handed groom became aware of the fact that he was being ridiculed, and he unlinked himself to the height of six feet, looked up and down the aisle and said: "There seems to be considerable nodding and winking around here because I'm hugging the girl who was married to me at 7 o'clock this morning. If the rules of this railroad forbid a man from hugging his wife after he's paid full fare then I'm going to quit, but if the rules don't and this winking and blinking isn't bitten short off when we pass the next mile-post, I'm going to begin on the front seats and create a rising market for false teeth and crutches!" It there were any more winks and blinks in that car the groom didn't catch 'em at it.

Angling for Whales.

The fact that whales abound in sufficient numbers immediately outside the harbor of San Francisco—between the Farallones and the Golden Gate—to warrant the establishment of a whaling industry of some importance, is not generally known, the idea generally entertained being that those waters are too far south to become the resort of schools of whales, and that only an occasional fish, separated from his companions in the north, strays into a latitude so far from his supposed habitat—the Indian Ocean. Considerable numbers of whales can be found at all seasons of the year in the ocean adjacent to that port, and within a distance that can be easily traversed in a day. Between the 1st of May and the 1st of October is the most favorable season for fishing, on account of the calm weather generally prevailing. When fishing in rough weather there is always some liability of losing the fish by breaking the line or by cutting loose when the vessel is endangered. The abundance of whales on that coast is accounted for by the fact that whales migrate southward along the coast in winter, returning northward during the summer, and are constantly in motion. The varieties of whales which may be caught in that vicinity are the sulphur bottom, which is about 130 feet long, the largest in the world, and weighs in the neighborhood of 200 tons, yielding a small quantity of valuable bone, but being rich in oil; the humpback, weighing 120 tons, the California grays, eighty tons, and the finbacks and blackfish form the remainder. Sperm whales, which are valuable on account of the large quantity of spermaceti which they yield, are but rarely found in those waters, and prove a valuable addition to a vessel's catch. Capt. Thomas Whitelaw is now constructing a little screw steamer, sixty-five feet long, sixteen wide and nine deep, with which he intends to inaugurate the business of whaling outside the Heads. She will be completely decked over, so that a sea can go completely over her without causing damage. She is built very strongly, and is deeper than ordinary, so that she can be drawn some distance into the water by a whale, to which she may be made fast without danger. She will be fitted with two compound engines—four cylinders. She can carry coal enough for a run of thirty days, which will be stored in the after part, and with the weight of her machinery is expected to keep her propeller submerged, to avoid the "beating" caused by the blades when the vessel pitches, which can be heard by a whale a considerable distance, and frightens him off. The cabin will be in the forward part, and will be occupied by the crew of five men. The vessel will be launched in about two weeks, and is expected to have a speed of nine knots an hour. Her large coal capacity is to enable her to take an Arctic trip if required. The mode of killing whales adopted by this vessel is by the whaling rocket or bomb-lance, which can be discharged from the vessel, which method possesses considerable advantages over the old style of hunting whales in a boat and with the land-lance. The expectations are that an average of ten fish will be caught each month. When a whale is dispatched the steamer will tow him into port and land him at the reduction works, where the carcass will be treated by an improved process by which every portion will be utilized. When a whale is caught at sea the blubber is stripped off, and the bone removed, after which the carcass is set adrift, and floats around until completely devoured by sharks and birds. Under the process to be tried by Capt. Whitelaw the fish will be cut into sections, and without discriminating between blubber, flesh or bones, will be placed in large steam-tight tanks made of boiler plates, into which steam at a high pressure and temperature will be introduced, which will have the effect of completely digesting the mass and separating the oil, which will be then drawn off. The process will be completed in about eight hours, when the residue of flesh and bones will be taken out, dried, and afterwards ground together to produce a fertilizer. The bones are valuable for this purpose on account of the phosphate of lime which they will yield. Three "trys" can be made in a day, and as three digesters have been constructed—each capable of containing a ten-foot section of a whale—a large fish can be reduced in about two days. An Arctic whale yields from 1700 to 3500 pounds of bone, worth $2.75 a pound by the cargo at New Bedford. Each whale also yields from 100 to 250 barrels of oil, worth $19 per barrel.

Bill Shepard and the Big Buck.

Waiting for the train at the Northwestern depot the other day, a reporter heard Capt. Bones, a well-known hunter, telling this story to a small but interested audience, composed chiefly of Tom St. George: "Did you ever hear how Bill Shepard shot seven deer out of one drove? It was a still, cloudy day, and there were two feet or more of snow on the ground. There were just an even dozen in the herd, and Bill had got behind a big log within ten rods of them. He had to snake a hole through the snow on the log to get sight. He got all ready, picked out the biggest one, and blazed away. It was a big buck, and dropped to the shot. Well, you know if a deer can't see or scent you he won't run, and you can keep on shooting as long as you like. So when Bill dropped the first one the balance just scattered and came right back together again. He shoved in another cartridge, picked out the biggest one again, and he tumbled too. Bill put a third cartridge down, picked out the biggest one again, and he dropped to the shot. By this time Bill was pretty well excited. He had only four more cartridges left; but kept as cool as possible, picked out the biggest every time and fetched him. When he fired his last shot, he sat and watched 'em for a long time, but finally he had to show himself, and the balance of the deer left. It was just about this time the rest of us came up and inquired what all the shooting was about. Bill was feeling awfully because he hadn't any more cartridges, but he swore he'd got seven deer anyway, We went over to see. The snow was mightily tramped down, sure enough, but there was only one deer—a big buck. There wasn't the least trace of the other six, every one of which Bill saw drop to the shot. Then we went up and looked at the one he got, and as sure as your're born he had seven bullets in him. Bill had shot the same one every shot. He would fall, and then, jump up again, and being the biggest one, Bill picked him out every time. Of course it must have been the last shot that settled him, for there was only one ball that would have killed him."

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

If you would not have affliction to visit you twice, listen at once to what it teaches.

Nothing so adorns the face as cheerfulness; when the heart is in flower, its bloom and beauty pass to the features.

He who boasts that his heart has remained whole, confesses that he has only a prosaic, out-of-the-way-corner heart.

To be unkind or rude to others and yet expect to be treated by them with courtesy and affection, is absurd and selfish.

Look at the pages of your own heart, and you will see a dim reflection of what the recording angel has written about you.

The more a man knows about a subject the greater will be his charity for, and sympathy with views differing from his own.

The wise man is happy when he gains his own approbation, and the fool when he recommends himself to the applause of those about him.

Truth and purity, like so many gems in the life and example of the good man, cannot but shame and condemn error and vice in others.

It is easy enough to make sacrifices for those we love, but for our enemy we have to struggle and overcome self. Such a victory is noble.

Those who, without knowing us, think or speak evil of us, do us no harm; it is not us they attack, but the phantom of their own imagination.

Politeness may prevent the want of wit and talents from being observed; but wit and talent cannot prevent the discovery of the want of politeness.

A thoughtfulness for the comfort of those about us, a pleasant smile, a kind word—these are the ingredients of which good manners are chiefly composed.

Anybody can soil the reputation of an individual, however pure and chaste, by uttering a suspicion that his enemies will believe and his friends never hear of.

If you wish success in life make perseverence your bosom friend, experience your wise counsellor, caution your elder brother, and hope your guardian genius.

Unselfish people are always polite because good manners are only the absence of selfishness. They are the doing unto others as we would wish to be done unto.

So much are we the slaves of the world, that we sometimes hesitate to do an action which is prompted by the heart, fearful that it may be mistaken by others for folly.

He that sympathises in all the happiness of others perhaps simself enjoys the safest happiness, and he that is warned by all the folly of others has perhaps attained the soundest wisdom.

"There is good advice enough extant for the population of three worlds like ours," said an old preacher; "what we need most is to have this advice practically worked up into good examples."

Life has many ills, but the mind that views every object in the most cheering aspect and every doubtful dispensation as replete with latent good, bears within itself a powerful and perpetual antidote.

Religion gives to virtue the sweetest hopes, to unrepenting vice, just alarms, to true repentance, the most powerful consolations, but she endeavors above all things to inspire in men love, meekness and pity for men.

Contentment produces, in some measure, all those effects which the alchemist usually ascribes to what he calls the philosopher's stone, and it it does not bring riches it does the same thing by banishing the desire for them.

To ascertain the length of a day and night multiply the hour at which the sun rises by two; the result will be the length of the night. Multiply the hour at which the sun sets by two, and the result will be the length of the day.

Nothing is easier to a man of genius, nothing is more certain proof and part of it, than to compose what raises men's wonder and admiration; nothing more difficult than to show them distinctly the simplest and most obvious truths.

Every man stamps his value on himself. The price we challenge for ourselves is given us. There does not live on earth a man, be his station what it may, that says "I despise myself." Man is made little or great by his own will.

The fountain of content must spring up in the mind, and he who has so little knowledge of human nature as to seek happiness by changing anything but his disposition will waste his life in fruitless efforts and multiply the griefs which he proposes to remove.

People make a great mistake about heaven. They think it begins up yonder, but it really begins down here. If you are happy in the basement-story you are fitted to enjoy the other stories. But is you whine and moan here, heaven itself cannot change your mood.

If we long to bring forth all the fruit of the Spirit, let us strike our roots deep and wide in private prayer. That faith and support, that strength and grace which we seek of God in secret, that they may be excused in the hour of need, God will in that hour give us before men.

A great supply indicates a great charge. Oh that some would think of this! A man has grown richer than he used to be. Brother, with more barley and straw you ought to keep more dromedaries. I mean that God does not send the corn for the mice to destroy, but he means it to be eaten.

A woman may be handsome or remarkably attractive in various ways, but if she is not personally neat she cannot hope to win admiration. Fine clothes will not conceal the slattern. A young woman with her hair always in disorder and her clothes hanging about her as if suspended from a prop, is always repulsive.

The chief peril of the Church to-day arises not from infidel or ignorant assault. It comes from the false vows of partial consecration of true members. A full fidelity on the part of each, producing a glad harmonious and self-denying ministry of banded believers, will most effectually refute and at length utterly overthrow all outward assailants.

STATE TICKET.

SUPREME JUDGE,
GEORGE A. JENKS, Jefferson Co,

AUDITOR GENERAL,
ROBERT P. DECHERT, Philadelphia.

MARYLAND MOVING.

The State Democratic Convention Yesterday Declares for Bayard.

BALTIMORE, June 9.—The Democratic state convention met here to-day. The whole proceedings were characterized by entire harmony. The resolutions decline to instruct, but express confidence in the distinguished ability of Thomas Francis Bayard, of Delaware. The following delegates at large to the Cincinnati convention were selected: William Pinkey Whyte, Philip E. Thomas, John Lee Carroll and Bernard Carter, esq. The nominations for electors at large were I. Nevett Steele and J. Thomas Chopkins.

The convention recommended the adhesion to the two-thirds rule in making the nominations for president and vice president.

Bruce, the colored candidate for Vice President before the Chicago convention received only eight votes out of 755. And that's just how the Republicans love the negroes.

WHAT THE LEADING PAPERS SAY.

A Weak Ticket.

From the Philadelphia Times.

The nomination makes every southern state democratic, makes Ohio doubtful, makes New York and New Jersey hardly debatable for the Republicans, and makes Indiana, California, Oregon and even Pennsylvania depend upon the verdict of Ohio in October. If Garfield's own state shall be lost in the preliminary October, the ensuing contest will be ended and his defeat overwhelming: while if he shall carry it by a reduced majority, as is inevitable against a strong democratic ticket his election will be then no more than possible. He will be assailed in his own state and by his political friends with uncommon bitterness and his integrity will be as positively questioned as the defamers of Blaine have questioned the purity of his public record. His own constituents and party associates have made this possible by standing out as his accusers. * * * * And as if it was predetermined that he should be overweighed in the race, the nomination of Arthur for vice president was loaded upon him to make the battle for the controlling state of New York a hopeless one. It is possible for democratic folly to elect the Garfield ticket. Its election will be impossible if statesmanship and patriotism shall be among the conspicuous attributes of the democratic candidates.

From the New York Herald.

But when we come to consider the actual candidate we do not know whether we ought to congratulate the republican party or to condole with it. Mr. Garfield is one of the most estimable and popular men in the republican party; but he is not the man whom the party would have spontaneously selected as its standard-bearer in an important presidential election. He is taken up only because the really strong men of the party were thought to have no chance for the nomination. His claims were never thought worthy of discussion in advance, and his nomination is one of the accidents or freaks of an abnormal political situation. * * * * The selection of General Arthur is judicious almost to the extent of artfulness.

From the New York Sun.

"In cousidering this nomination we desire first of all to thank God for the defeat of Grant and the decisive overthrow of the third-term conspiracy. It is an event on which the American people in a body may well offer up rejoicings to heaven; and the friends of liberty and of the rights of men in all nations under the sun should join with them in the manifestations of their heartfelt gratitude. But is General Garfield such a man that patriotic citizens of the United States can well and wisely support him for president? Can the executive authority of the republic be safely intrusted to him? These are questions which every voter should now ask; and we answer calmly and emphatically that he is not such a man."

From the New York World.

Mr. Garfield being thus merely an average republican candidate—a man whose strength in no way transcends the party strength, as does General Grant's strength, for example, and who will for the reason we have given fail to command even the party strength in the all important states of New York and Pennsylvania—it is plain that only ordinary sense and ordinary prudence will be required at Cincinnati to make a democratic victory sure.

The Chicago convention, we repeat, has opened to the democrats the road to the White House, and only wilful blindness can prevent the democrats from taking it.

From the Baltimore Gazette.

Like Mr. Hayes he comes from Ohio, but unlike the present occupant of the White House he cannot hope to take his seat through fraud and violence, and there is very little probability of his securing it through any other medium. During the canvass Mr. Garfield's record will come to the surface and there will not be found in it much to encourage the people to support him at the polls. His nomination recalls an ugly episode in connection with the disgraceful reign of the board of public work of Washington under the Boss Shepherd regime.

THE FIELD BOOM.

Gets a Fresh Send Off in the Georgia Democratic Convention.

ATLANTA, Ga., June 9.—The democratic state convention to-day selected Gen. A. R. Lawton, George T. Barnes, E. P. Howell, editor of the Constitution, and General P. M. B. Young, delegates at large to Cincinnati. The convention recommended adhesion to the two third rule. The delegation is represented as solid for Field, except one for Bayard and one for Tilden.

WEST VIRGINIA FOR THURMAN.

FAIRMOUNT, W. Va., June 10.—The first district democratic convention elected delegates to Cincinnati. They are uninstructed but favor Thurman.

The Republican Panic.

Special to the PATRIOT.

WASHINGTON, D.C., June 13.—There is a marked uneasiness among republicans in this city regarding the candidacy of General Garfield. The resurrection of the various scandals in which he was at one time and another engaged, and the indubitable and unanswerable documentary evidence which can be produced to fasten them upon him, have almost created a panic among the leaders of the party. Governor Forster, in a recent speech, attempted a defense against the Credit Mobilier and De Golyer charges, but his reasoning was so lame and impotent that it is admitted on all hands mere harm than good was accomplished by it. The third-term advocates do not conceal their satisfaction with this condition of affairs, and the best informed lookers on here readily predict that the party organization will go to smash unless Garfield, upon his arrival, can point a way out of the difficulty.

Last week President Hayes sent in to the senate, the name of Ex-Gov. Hartranft, for Collector of Philadelphia. Poor fellow—he ought to have an office once.

WHAT GARFIELD HAS TO SAY.

The Republican Nominees Officially Informed of their Selection.

CHICAGO, June 9.—The committee appointed by Senator Hoar to wait on generals Garfield and Arthur and notify them of their nomination found them in the club room of the Grand Pacifick hotel, and Senator Hoar, as chairman, made an appropriate speech.

Gen. Garfield replied:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: I assure you that the information you have officially given to me brings the sense of very grave responsibility, and especially so in view of the fact that I was a member of your body, a fact that could not have existed with propriety had I had the slightest expectation that my name would be connected with the nomination for the office. I have felt, with you, great solicitude concerning the situation of our party during the struggle; but, believing that you are correct in assuring me that substantial victory has been reached in the conclusion, it gives me a gratification far greater than any personal pleasure your announcement can bring.

I accept the trust committed to my hands. As to the work of our party and as to the character of the campaign to be entered upon, I will take an early occasion to reply more fully than I can properly do to-night.

I thank you for the assurance of confidence and esteem you have presented to me, and hope we shall see our future as promising as are the indications to-night.

Senator Hoar, in the same manner, presented the nomination to General Arthur, who accepted it in a brief and informal way.

The Republicans of Union county had their primary elections last Saturday. The following is the vote as presented by the return judges:

Congress, G. B. Miller 352, John Strong 1, Wm. B. Young 41.

Senate, Alfred Hayes 1150.

Assembly, Charles S. Wolfe 1252.

Prothonotary, C. H. Hassenplug 987.

Surveyor, C. M. Hayes 802.

Associate Judge, George M. Royer 271, James Lepley 231, Peter Hursh 173, A. S. Hoch 165, David Royer 159, Joseph Lebard 146, David Mitchell 125, David Meyers 72.

INDIANA DEMOCRATS.

The State Instructs for Hendricks and the Unit Rule.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 9.—The Democratic state convention met this morning. The hall, with a seating capacity of 3,000, was fully occupied.

The convention was called to order by the chairman of the central committee. Hon. Francis D. Hood, of Bartholomew, was chosen temporary chairman. The usual committees were appointed. Ex-Governor Thos. A. Hendricks was elected as permanent chairman.

The resolutions adopted instruct the delegates to present the name of Mr. Hendricks to the Cincinnati convention as a nominee for president, and to vote as a unit on all questions before the convention.

After a call of the districts for the names of delegates to the Cincinnati convention, the convention proceeded to the nomination of a state ticket. Franklin Landers, Isaac Gray and Alexander C. Downey were put in nomination for governor.

Mr. Gray's name was withdrawn after the first ballot and Mr. Landers was nominated by acclamation.

The delegates at large to Cincinnati are J. E. M'Donald, D. W. Voorhees, W. E. Niblack and J. R. Slack.

One of the most urgent demands of our time is a system of education which shall train the young to apply their school learning. At the Pennsylvania State College practical instruction in Agriculture, Horticulture, Botany, Zoology, Mechanist, Chemistry, etc; is given, and thus theory in the class room is applied and enforced by experience in the field and laboratory. Spring session opens April 9th. For catalogue and full information address the Business Manager, State College, Centre Co., Pa. tf

Rumors Among Politicians that Garfield Will be Withdrawn.

Special to the PATRIOT.

PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—There has been talk in the inner circle of republican politicians here of the possibility of Garfield's name being taken off the national ticket. It is becoming painfully apparent that the republican party cannot move forward to success with the load of obliquy which their candidate's connection with the Credit Mobilier and other congressional scandals has brought upon them. Hence the talk of forcing him to withdraw. In the event of his withdrawal it is thought electoral tickets would be run in the several states pledge to candidates who will suit the preferences of the republican voters with a view of permitting the electoral college to select in the end.

Washington Letter.

Washington, D. C., June 12th, 1880.

The New York Herald of yesterday has a long editorial article concerning the charges of official corruption against Garfield. The Herald says that Garfield is the first Presidential candidate against whom charges of the kind were ever made, and that he should show them to be false or should cease to be a candidate. The main accusations are two: First, that he received Credit Mobilier stock or scrip from Oakes Ames, as some other members of Congress did, without paying for it; drew dividends on it; denied before the investigating committee that he owned or ever had owned any, and when confronted with full proof made a lame explanation. He was one of the Republican members in whose case the Republican investigating committee gave no opinion, though, in other cases, if the evidence showed the accused members to be innocent the committee hastened to say so.

The other charge is that he received money corruptly from contractors in this district. The circumstances may be given in a few words. Several years ago Congress investigated our former District government. That Government, which may be summed up as "Boss Shepherd" was bankrupt, and was endeavoring to get a very large appropriation from Congress. Garfield was chairman of the House Committee on appropriations, and a friend of Shepherd. He also had some Western friends who asked for and received from Shepherd, while the question of the appropriation was pending, a contract covering three-quarters of a million dollars. Garfield received from these contractors, it was shown, $5000 before the contract was given out. He claimed before the investigating Committee that this was a fee for a legal opinion as to the quality of the pavement to be laid by the contractors. But no such opinion was ever put on file, and, upon being pressed Garfield could only remember that he met Shepherd on the street and "spoke to him about it."

These matters are all of record here, none of them can be denied. Garfield never has denied them. Neither has he satisfactorily explained them, nor can he do so. These charges are those which if true, the Herald says should cause Garfield to "step down and out," as a Presidential candidate.

Whatever course Garfield may pursue, the exposure in his case teaches the Democrats a valuable lesson by which it is to be hoped they may profit. No man's name should be considered at Cincinnati unless he can show a clean personal and official record, or against whom the public has any reason to believe charges as damaging as those against Garfield can be made. CARROLL.

It was pretty generally believed that that boss of a blatherskite, congressman Hendrick B. Wright, of the 12th Penna, district, voted with the Republicans and Greenbackers, in the Curtin Yocum contest, just to please the Greenbackers and thereby secure the doubtful honor of a nomination by them, for President, but the Greenback convention at Chicago last week shoved him aside, and thus he gets his reward.

The Greenbackers held their national convention at Chicago last week and nominated the following ticket: For President Gen. James B. Weaver of Iowa, and for Vice President F. J. Chambers, of Texas.

—THE MILLHEIM MARBLE WORKS are prepared to furnish anything in their line of trade, from a little head stone to a costly and elaborate monument, at prices that can not be undersold in the state. If you want anything to mark the last resting place of a departed friend the Millheim Works is the place to serve you.

PICNIC.—The town schools will picnic in Dutweiler's grove next Saturday. All persons are cordially invited to attend.

Baskets will be taken to the ground and safely returned in the evening if left at the school house before half past eight o'clock in the morning. The owners of the baskets are requested to attach their names to the same.

—If you desire to mark the last resting place of a dear departed friend with a tombstone, couch or monument, the Millheim Marble Works is your place to go to. You can buy as low here as you can in Philadeldhia.

—Judge Allison informs us that they had a severe storm in Bald Eagle valley on Sunday. Many trees were blown down and buildings unroofed and otherwise damaged. Two bridges crossing Bald Eagle creek at Lock Haven were unroofed.

—The JOURNAL BOOK STORE sells all the school books recently adopted by the school boards of Millheim Boro', Penn, Haines, Miles and Gregg townships.

KEEP COOL.—It is very essential to health and happiness this warm weather to keep cool. Don't get excited. Don't allow anything to ruffle your temper. Drink no stimulents—but above all provide yourself with one of Lewin's splendid and comfortable summer suits. Our word for it if you follow these directions you will be serene and happy.

—The Central Normal school of Lock Haven has re-elected the following officers: President, ex-Governor Bigler; vice president, Gen. Jesse Merril; secretary, S. M, M'Cormick; treasurer, Thomas Yaidley; steward, E. W. Bigony; matron, Mrs. E. W. Bigony There are now nearly 250 pupils in the school.

—Cherries will be plenty in Lewisburg, but scarce in Millheim.

—The proposed paper mill at Lock Haven will employ 150 hands and distribute $30,000 a month in the neighborhood.

—We understand that our town council is about to fill up the mud puddle in the diamond and make other improvements. Hope they will.

UTICA was ten months subscribing $8,000 to finish a church building, and only four days raising $50,000 to establish a new brewery.

—John D. Foote's brick pavement in front of the old Harter property was all out of kelter, and so he had it taken up and will relay it one of these days all level and smooth.

—The Womens' Christian Temperance Union of Lewisburg had a festival recently and realized $99,29, sixty dollars of which some was sent to the Ladies' Relief Society of Milton.

—The General Conference of the M. E. Church, now in session at Cincinnati, passed a resolution forbidding members of the church to sign applications for tavern license. Expulsion from the church is the penalty for offenders.

—It seems that every fellow from Millheim who was in Bellefonte last week called at all the printing offices up there just to get his name in the paper and be called a prominent citizen of Millheim. That's just how some men do.

—The Centre County Agricultural fair is to be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, October 6th 7th and 8th, next. What is the time fixed for the Union connty fair. Are they both on the same time again?

—At a citizens' meeting at Lock Haven on Saturday night sufficient money was subscribed to secure an extensive paper and pulp manufactory, to be built by Armstrong, Dixon & Co., of Philadelphia.

—On Tuesday was the day of appeals for Penn townships and Millheim borough. The entire board of commisioners, Messrs. Gregg, Dunkle and Swab, were present. Quite a number of our people appealed from their assessments and many succeeded in having their valuations lowered. Some difficult questions also arose for the consideration of the commissioners.

—Dr. Musser has discovered a very minute worm at work upon the growing wheat which threatens to do considerable damage. It is found at the grains and destroys their growth, and is so small that it can scarcely be seen by the naked eye.

Mr. Amos Alexander informs us that a similar insect did much damage to the wheat crop in Penns Valley, some forty years ago, but it disappeared after one season.

—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Lewisburg, Centre and Spruce Creek Railroad Company, held on Tuesday the 8th in Philadelphia, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Strickland Kneass; Directors, G. B. Roberts, Edward Smith, Wistar Morris, J. N. DuDarry, Eli Sliffer, James P. Ooburn and G. F. Miller.

—Lock Haven is a tax striken community, as a fifty-six mill rate was adopted at a recent council meeting. According to the Journal it requires eight mills for city purposes, fourteen mills to pay interest on bonded debt, nine mills to support the poor, five mills for street repairs, fourteen mills for water and six mills for fire expenses.

—Neighbor D. A. Musser is making very fine walks in his yard, fronting the house. He first digs a trench about a foot deep and fills it up with broken stone nearly level with the ground. He then covers the stone with a mixture of cement and pebbles, and on that a coating of cement mixed with sand is applied which makes a fine, smooth surface. If these walks are proof against the action of frost they will certainly be the best and cheapest walk yet out.

—The Potter county Enterprise is informed that English, the notorious outlaw of Elk, spent two nights last week on a branch of the lower Sinnemahoning. He was well armed, had plenty of money and was not at all backward in talking of the murder. He also showed the scar on his leg where the ball grazed when he was escaping from the scene of the murder. English stated that he had slept but a single night and said he would never be taken alive.

—A rose on an apple tree is surely a rare growth; yet that is what we are enabled to report on authority of Rev. Jacob Morris, of West Salem. On a crab tree in his orchard appeared this spring a fine, full white rose, which was plucked and is now to be seen at this office. It is a case of voluntary hybridization, and a very remarkable one at that.—Greenville Argus.

If the Rev. Jacob Morris will but just examine the matter a little closely he will find the fine white rose is nothing but an over grown apple blossom. We have had the same thing here. Roses don't grow on apple trees any more than do figs on thistles. That's all.

For the Journal.

NATURE.

The leaves complete their patterns fine,
What artist gave them the design?
The flowers their matchless hues display,
What master's hand can paint as they?
The birds find their old haunts—who showed
To them th' unmarked, aerial road?
The pines their stately trunks uprear
With ease, with leisure, year by year;
The cheerful sun the clouds updraws
And fills the rivers without pause;
And all the planets run their round
Without a sign of toil or sound.
Thus nature holds her onward course,
Sweetly unconscious, rich in force.

YONEY.

News Miscellany.

Louis Nitscher of Utica wished to make his wife believe he intended to commit suicide; so he swallowed a full ounce of laudanum, believing that the dose would be harmless in consequence of its amount. He found however, that the drug had a speedy and alarming effect. He ran to a police station and begged that all the physicians in the city be sent for. Three were brought, and for nine hours a most remarkable struggle was maintained to save his life. He was violently exercised and stomach pump was used, but he fell into complete unconsciousness, and ceased to breath. Artificial respiration was kept up by alternately raising his arms above his head and depressing his breast. His heart ceased to beat, and its action was revived by electricity. Stimulants were forced into his stomach and injected under the skin of his legs. But he died nevertheless.

THE ARMY WORM.

Terrible Ravages Committed by the Pest in New Jersey.

LONG BRANCH, June 10.—The ravages of the army worm upon the wheat, corn and timothy crops in Ocean and Monmouth counties and other parts of New Jersey still continue. Farmers who at sunset see their grass and rye doing well awake at sunrise to find acres on acres destroyed. The rapidity and thoroughness with which these worms do their work are appalling, and coupled with the late drought this new scourge is likely to make the year 1880 one of serious disaster to a large part of New Jersey. About Long Branch the worm appears in the greatest numbers. Hardly a blade of grass is standing in John Hoey's Hollywood park, the destruction of the forty acres comprising the park being accomplished in two days. Forty loads of sod cut on Tuesday by Superintendent M'Kay, of Hollywood, to replace bare spots, were totally eaten up in three hours, looking as though a fire had swept through them. On a foot square of sod 587 were actually counted. In the vicinity of Freehold the worm has made terrible ravages upon the corn fields. Between Red Bank and Long Branch the Central New Jersey railroad track is black with the worms which are traveling westward. Saturday's express train, as it sped along by Little Silver station, threw hundreds of insects into the coaches of the New York way train standing on the track.

SENTENCED TO DEATH.

George Smith and Catharine Miller, Who Murdered the Latter's Husband.

Special Dispatch to THE TIMES.

WILLIAMSPORT, June 11.

To-day Judge Cummin filled an elaborate opinion denying the motion for a new trial of Catharine Miller and George Smith, convicted of the murder of Andrew Miller, near Jersey Shore, on the night of the 18th of March. Catharine Miller was the wife of the murdered man and she conspired with Smith to put her husband out of the way, so that they might live together. Her paramour decoyed the old man out to the barn, killed him with a club and then suspended him by the neck so as to create the impression that he had committed suicide. Mrs. Miller furnished the rope. Both confessed and were committed on the 10th of May. After the Judge had denied the motion for a new trial District Attorney Hart moved for judgment, when the Court pronounced the terrible sentence of death upon them as they stood side by side. Such a scene was never witnessed in this court before and before the Judge was through with his unpleasant duty he was visibly affected. This is the first woman convicted of murder in Lycoming county. While the man will undoubtly be hanged it is thought the woman will escape with imprisonment.

The Storm in ClintonCounty.

LOCK HAVEN, June 14.—A terrible wind and rain storm passed over this city and county yesterday afternoon. Houses and barns were unroofed, bridges were damaged, and fruit orchards, gardens, shade trees, fences and sheds were destroyed. The city flouring mill, of this place, was blown ont of line. No lives were lost.

Jacob Bennett heard angry voices in his house at Sedalia, Mo., and on peeping in saw that the wife whom he was living with was confronted by the wife whom he had deserted. He cautiously stole away and sent a policeman to separate the women, who were found fighting furiously with knives.

A MIDNIGHT HORROR.

A Collision in Long Island Sound. Great Loss of Life.

STONINGTON, Conn., July 12.—Between 11 and 12 o'clock last night the steamers Stonington and Narragansett collided, off the Connecticut river, in Long Island Sound. The Stonington plunged her bow into the starboard of the Narraganset, just in front of the wheel. The side of the Narraganset was crushed in and cut almost to the water's edge. Water poured into the hole and the steamer began to sink. But this was not all. The gas began escaping. It caught fire and the flames spread rapidly over the whole ship. A scene of wild confusion followed. In a moment the ill-fated steamer was filled with the shrieks and cries of the frightened passengers. Lights were finally procured and then the passengers fought for chairs, mattresses life preservers and every article that could possibly aid to float them. Then there was a rush for the boats with which the Narragansett was well supplied. These were sometimes overcrowded and capsized. Many of the passengers jumped into the water. It was a wild awful scene. People were clinging to rafts, to boats, to everything movable that could be thrown overboard, or were supported by life-preservers, or were swimming without any support.

The total loss of life is not yet known but is supposed to reach about fifty. The entire number of passengers was between 350 and 400.

SECOND ARRIVAL OF SPRING CLOTHING
AT THE
PHILADELPHIA BRANCH
Allegheny Street, Opposite Reynold's Opera House

"Hello, neighbor! Will you be good enough to hold my horse minutes and inform me where that cheap store is the people talk much about?"

"Oh, yes, with pleasure. The Philadelphia Branch, you mean?"

"Yes, that is the name. It sounds down the valleys and up the plains."

"Do you see away down that street yonder, where that great crowd of people is congregated?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, that is the place. It is unnecessary for me to enumerate their goods; they have them. Only go ahead, you will not be disappointed, either in quality or price. You will find everything you want, in their line, and very accommodating men to wait on you, and show you goods, whether you buy or not. Be particular in going through to make your selections, as you might be detained in getting the second opportunity. They will adhere strictly to their motto: "One Price" and no overcharge to catch the customer, and all goods marked in plain figures. So you can see for yourself. Go ahead, neighbor; you cannot be disappointed in buying clothing there and such other goods as they keep. So good-by neighbor, I must be jogging along."

"Say, hold on! I will not detain you long. As you have been there and priced their goods, be kind enough to tell me their prices?"

"Oh, with pleasure; then you will wonder how they sell so cheap."

Facts for the Curious.

The greyhound runs by eyesight only, and this we observe as a fact. The carrier-pigeon flies his two hundred and fifty miles homeward by sight—namely, from point to point of objects which he has marked; but this is only our conjecture. The fierce dragon-fly, with twelve thousand lenses in his eye, darts from angle to angle with the rapidity of a flashing sword, and as rapidly darts back, not turning in the air, but with a clash reversing the action of his four wings, and instantaneously calculating the distance of the objects, or he would dash himself to pieces. But in what conformation of the eye does this consist. No one can answer.

A cloud of ten thousand gnats dance up and down in the sun, the minutest interval between them, yet no one knocks another headlong upon the grass, or breaks a leg or wing, long and delicate as they are. Suddenly, amidst your admiration of this matchless dance, a peculiarly high-shouldered, vicious gnat, with long, pendant nose, darts out of the rising and falling cloud, and settling on your cheek, inserts a poisonous sting. What possessed the little wretch to do this? No one knows.

A carriage comes suddenly upon al flock of geese on a narrow road, and drives straight through the middle of them. A goose was never yet fairly run over, nor a duck.—They are under the very wheels and hoofs, and yet somehow they contrive to flap and waddle off. Habitually stupid, heavy and indolent, they are nevertheless equa to any emergency.

Why does the lonely woodpecker, when he decends his tree and goes to drink, stop several times on his way, listen and look round, before he takes his draught? No one knows. How is it that the species of ants which is taken in battle by other ants to be made slaves, should be black, or colored ants? No one knows.

The power of judging of actual danger, and the free and easy boldness which results from it, are by no means uncommon. Many birds seem to have a most correct notion of a gun's range, and while scrupulously careful to keep beyond it, confine their care to this caution, though the most obvious resource would be to fly right away out of sight, and hearing, which they do not choose to do. And they sometimes appear to make even an ostentatious use of their power, fairly putting their wit and cleverness in antagonism to that of man, for the benefit of their fellows. We lately read an account by a naturalist in Brazil, of an expedition he made to one of the islands of the Amazon to shoot spoon-bills, ibises, and other of the magnificent grallatorial birds, which are most abundant there.—His design was completely baffled, however, by a wretched little sandpiper that preceded him, continually uttering his tell-tale cry, which at once aroused all the birds within hearing. Throughout the day did this individual bird continue his self-imposed duty of sentinel to others, effectually preventing the approach of the fowler to the game, and yet managing to keep out of the range of his gun.

The Bahama Pineapple.

A large proportion of the area of the Bahama Islands is devoted to the cultivation of fruit, of which oranges and pineapples are principal; and at the present time the fields in the estates on which the pineapples are growing form a peculiar feature in the landscape. The appearance of the broad expanse of young fruit, with its clusters of delicately tinted, but sharp and serrated leaves, rising only a short distance from the ground, and covering the undulating fields, produces a very remarkable effect. In no other branch of agriculture can so curious a picture be produced as in the growth of these vast numbers of pines. As many as a million and a half of the fruit have been collected from a single acre at one crop. The appearance of these pineapples estates has as little in common with the sugar plantations or paddy-fields of the tropics as with the corn fields or vineries of Europe. In a short time these pineapples will be making their appearance in the Foreign markets. They are shipped in an unripe state, and mature during the voyage, and hence are not so excellent in quality as the fine hot-house fruit, or as if they were properly ripened in the ground. The pineapples of New Providence, however, are superior to any other variety, and often attain an enormous size. One grown in Pembrokeshire, weighing 10½ lbs., and measured 10½ in, in height, exclusive of stalk and crown, and 22 in in circumference, was served up at the coronation banquet of George IV., and since then the improved modes of cultivation have greatly increased the size and quality of the fruit. There is an enormous demand for the Bahama pineapples both in Europe and America and a new industry has lately sprung up in the island in preserving the fruit n tins when they are fully ripened; one factory in Nassau alone exports annually a million tins, valued at £16.000. These fruits are superior to those sent away earlier in the season, as they are ripened naturally and packed in perfect condition, instead of being gathered when only half ripe.

AGRICULTURE.

HUNGARIAN GRASS.—Comparatively few farmers raise this crop, though it is very productive and exceellent for most kind of stock, if fed in the proper manner. The time between sowing and harvesting is shorter than for any field crop raised on farms. It is useless in this latitude to sow it early in the season. To produce a good crop the entire growth of the of the plant must take place during very warm weather. If sown at the same time oats are, the plants will make a very slow growth, and will remain stunted during the entire season. The trouble some farmers have experienced with Hungarian hay has arisen mainly from allowing the grass to remain uncut till the seed was nearly or quite ripe. It should be harvested as soon as the seeds form and before they have commenced to mature. Another difficulty has arisen from the amount of dust Hungarian grass often contains. As it grows on land that was recently plowed and harvested, and over the surface of which there is no sod, much dust is likely to be disturbed in raking and pitching the hay. This may be prevented very largely by cutting the grass quite high, and by gathering it when it is cured with a hand-rake instead of with a horse-rake. If gathered in this way and pitched on the cart when the ground's moist with dew nearly all the dust usually found in Hungarian hay may be avoided.

SOWING ORCHARD GRASS.—Orchard grass is very deservedly coming more into cultivation every year, both North and South, and it will perhaps benefit some to be told how to sow it. It should always be mixed with clover seed. To mix the seed properly, put down upon a floor half bushel of orchard grass seed, and scatter over that one quart of clover seed; repeat until you get a stout pile say four or five bushels. Then mix thoroughly; spread out upon the flour, and sprinkle water upon the pile stirring all the time until quite wet, then mix in plaster or dry ashes, or even bran, until sufficiently dry to separate when thrown from the hand. Throw it in bulk till next morning, when it is ready for sowing. Taken through this process it can be sown with as much regularity as wheat, regardless of ordinary winds. If it remains in bulk more than one night in warm weather, it will heat, and must be opened. Except for meadows or standing pastures, orchard grass is too expensive. For the ordinary shifts, it is better to use clover seed alone, as orchard grass does not do its best under two or three years, when, if the land is good, it will have made a sod that will resist the action of the feet of the stock in wet weather.

REPAIRS IN ROADS AND PATHS.—It should be remembered that the worst spot in a piece of road, whether public or private way, measures the capacity of the team for hauling loads over it, or in other words, a team can draw between two given points only what it can draw over the hardest spot, whether it be a steep hill or a muddy slough hole, no matter how perfect the other portions of the way may be. Any man would be considered a fool who should keep a good pair of horses for hauling loads and then persist in using them on a one-horse wagon, drawing but a half load at a time, and yet that is just what we are all doing, who year after year haul manure, farm products or merchandise over roads that, by the expenditure of a small amount of labor, would enable us to haul double the weight we now draw. April is oftentimes a good month for making repairs in roads and paths.

HOW TO MANAGE A YOUNG BULL.—To make a first class animal he should run with the cow till he is six months old at least. If weaned earlier, feed on new milk just from the cow three times a day till he is six months old, then twice a day till eight months, then once a day for a month or so longer. At an early day, say a month old, give him a little fine hay to pull at, and later let him have some oatmeal, a little oil-cake, vegetables, etc., increasing the rations gradually as he grows older, Weaning from milk should be gradual and in pasture time. Ring his nose at eight months and handle him from that time on daily. After he is weaned, feed as you would other cattle to keep them in the best condition. Do not handle the ring after it is put in until the wound is entirely healed, and rub on his nose some mutton tallow twice a day.

SORE THROAT, COUGH, COLD and similar troubles, if suffered to progress, result in serious Pulmonary Affections, oftentimes incurable. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" reach directly the seat of the disease, and give almost instant relief.

A DISCOVERY ABOUT CORN.—An exchange tells of a man who plants, two or three weeks after the crop is planted, a new hill of corn every fifteenth row, each way. And this is the reason: If the weather becomes dry after the filling time, the silk and tassels both become dry and dead. In this condition, if it should become seasonable, the silk revives and renews its growth, but the tassels do not recover. Then for want of pollen, the new silk is unable to fill the office for which it was designed. The pollen from the replanted corn is then ready to supply silk, and the filling is completed. He says nearly all the abortive ears so common in corn crops, are caused by the want of pollen, and he has known ears to double their size in this filling.

IT is said that six bushels of peas are equal to ten bushels of corn for fattening hogs, and that peas yield a larger number of bushels per acre than corn.

EXPERIMENT shows that with Early Rose potatoes the smallest amount of seed in the hill yields the best crop.

Mr. Partington Says

Don't take any of the quack rostrums, as they are regimental to the human cistern; but put your trust in Hop Bitters, which will cure general dilapidation, costive habits and comic diseases. They saved Isaac from a severe extract of tripod fever. They are the ne plus unum of medicines.—Boston Globe.

—INTOXICATING liquors produce diarrhœa or constipation, and a torpid condition of the liver, resulting in general debility and inertness of mind. To overcome this prostration, appeal is again made to the liquor as a stimulant, only to increase the gastric disturbance. The judicious application of such a tonic as Simmons' Liver Regulator would strike at the very root of the evil by correcting the condition of the liver, exciting the bowels to action, or correcting their looseness, stimulating the kidneys and removing the feeling of general depression, and with it the craving for liquor.

"This is to certify that I suffered with the Gastritus for four months, and could not be relieved until I procured Dr. Simmons' Liver Regulator, and was entirely cured in a short time.

DOMESTIC.

ONIONS.—From our own experience, and the observation of others, we can fully indorse the testimony of the St. Louis Miller, on the healthful properties of the above esculent. Lung and liver complaints are certainly benefited, often cured, by a free consumption of onions; either cooked or raw. Colds yield to them like magic. Don't be afraid of them. Taken at night all offense will be wanting by morning, and the good effects will amply compensate for the trifling annoyance. Taken regularly they greatly promote the health of the lungs and the digestive organs. An extract made by boiling down the juice of onions to a syrup, and taken as a medicine, answers the purpose very well, but fried, roasted or boiled, onions are better. Onions are a very cheap medicine, within everybody's reach, and they are not by any means as "bad to take" as the costly nostrums a neglect of their use may necessitate.

HOW TO CLEAN BRASS AND COPPER.—The following mixture will be found the best thing for cleaning brass, copper, tin, stairrods, taps, and even windows, and it is quite worth the trouble of making once a year, as quantities I give will last the time, and the best way is to store it in wide-mouthed pickle jars of glass or stone: 1 pound whitening, 1 pound rotten stone, 1 pound of soft soap, 1 teacupful vinegar, as much water as will make it a thick paste. Let it boil fully ten minutes, and when nearly cold add half a pint of spirits of turpentine. When you use it put very little on a rag rub the article you wish to clean well with it until it becomes bright, and then polish with a leather dipped in powdered Bath brick. Unless you use Bath brick it soon tarnishes, but Bath brick preserves the polish.

KEEPING FISH FRESH WITH SUGAR.—A method adopted in Portugal for preserving fish consists in removing the viscera and sprinkling sugar over the interior, keeping the fish in a horizontal position, so that the sugar may penetrate as much as possible, It is said that fish prepared in this way can be kept completely fresh for a long time, the flavor being a perfect as it recently caught. Salmon thus treated before salting and smoking possess a much more agreeable taste, a tablespoon of sugar being sufficient for a five pound fish.

COMPOTE ORANGES.—Put a handful of loaf sugar to boil with a gill of water in a saucepan; when it boils, add the rind of three oranges minced finely or cut into very narrow strips; let the whole boil five minutes, add a liquor glass of brandy, and pour the syrup—hot—over half a dozen oranges, peeled and cored or cut up into any form you like. The oranges should be left in a basin with the syrup till quite cold, and then piled upon a dish and served.

OVEN SOUP.—One pound of good soup beef cut in small square pieces, two onions, two carrots and two potatoes, peeled and cut into slices, two tablespoonfuls of rice, half a pint of split peas, pepper and salt to taste, one bunch of pot-herbs minced fine, and one gallon cold water; put all these ingredients into an earthen vessel, cover very close and put the jar in a moderate oven for four hours; a good dish when the top of the stove is wanted for other cooking.

A SCOTTISH CAKE.—One pound of fresh butter, one pound of lump sugar, one pound of currants, half a pound of raisins chopped, a quarter of a pound of candied lemon and orange, one pound and three-quarters of flour, a small teaspoonful of soda put in the last thing, three eggs, one pint of milk; beat the butter to cream; then add the flour, eggs and milk by degrees, beating all the time; put the currants in last, then the soda; put spice to taste; bake it a long time.

TURKEY SOUP.—Save all the bones and break the backbone into two or three pieces; boil these in a little more water than you want soup, for an hour; then skim out the bone, and put in the meat cut in very small pieces, and boil a few moments more; then season, with a little salt and pepper.

SOFT MOLASSES GINGERBREAD.—One cup of molasses, one teaspoonful of saleratus, one of ginger, one tablespoonful of butter or lard, and a pinch of salt (if you use lard) Stir this together, and then pour on half a cup of boiling water and stir in one pint of flour. Bake about one inch deep in a sheet. This is very nice if palns are taken to have the water boiling, and to beat well, when the flour is added.

SUET PUDDING WITHOUT EGGS.—Take a piece of light bread dough (on a baking day) the size of a quart dipper; flatten out on your moulding board; add to this one cup of suet, one cup chopped raisins, one cup Zante currants; mix together thoroughly and set it to rise on a plate; when light enough, steam two hours.

WIT AND HUMOR.

Too much whiskey has had a very bad effect upon a man's bump of locality. A few days ago a speculator staggered across New street, opposite the Stock Exchange, and accosted a broker, saying: "Say, Mister, which is the other side of the way?" "Over there, of course," was the reply, as the astonished broker pointed to the opposite side of the street. "The deuse!" ejaculated the tipsy fellow, "J——y G——d told me a moment ago, when I was on that side, that it was over here. But I always said that he couldn,t tell the truth."

"And—and—" "And the protest will cost you twelve shillings. Please put it in the bank. Good morning, sir!"

A SIX-YEAR-OLD boy, living near Bridgeport, was questioned by his school teacher the other day as to his name. The boy said he hadn't got none. "But you must have some name," insisted the questioner; "what do they call you around home?" "They call me a genuine jackass," replied the little fellow with sincerity. The investigation was promptly abandoned.

What Better Evidence

Could the people ask to substantiate the merits of Dr. Pierce's Family Medicine than the fact that they have not only yearly grown in popular favor in this country, but the foreign demand for them has became so great as to necessitate the establishing of a branch of the celebrated World's Dispensary in London, England, that these blessings to the afflicted may be dispatched from that greatest commercial centre of the world to every country and people? Golden Medical Discovery is a concentrated, potent, alterative, or blood-cleansing remedy, that wins golden opinions of all who use it for all humors, from the common pimple, blotch or eruption, to the formidable scrofulous swelling. Internal fever, soreness and ulceration, yield to its benign influence. Consumption, which is but a form of scrofulous affection of the lungs, may in its early stages be cured by a free use of this God-given remedy. White Robes! White Robes!

For a long time, no sweeter and better collection of music for Sunday Schools has appeared. If we consider the Hymns, we find the best and most original thoughts expressed in pure poetry, of good lyrical character. Such phrases as "Pitying Savior, look with blessing," "Trust Him ever," "The better years be in," "Only a little while," "Precious love," "Are the sun goe down," "The celestial hills," and "A home, weary pilgrim," taken almost at random from its pages, indicate its tenderness and beauty. There are 125 songs; all good ones. White Robes will be mailed to any address for 50 cents. By A. J. Abbey and M. J. Munger. Price 50 cents, or $5 per dozen.

TEMPERANCE JEWELS. ($5 cts. or $3 60 per doz.)
